LETTER FROM GENERAL PLANER.

HEADGRAFTERS DAST, OF KENTGERY, HEADQUARTERS DEST. OF KENTUCKY, LOUISVILLE, KY., Oct. 30, 1865 ; Mr Dear Sir: I have read the letter of M

My Drank Sir. I have read the letter of Mr. Gant, and the proposed plan for regulating labor in Christian county for the coming year before the Planter's Association of that county with very great interest.

It is a great point gained that the people interested begin to regard this as a practical question, no longer merely political, and as one which will be greatly advanced by the aid of their practical minds.

It occurs to me that while the planters very naturally and properly feel a deep interest in the labor question that their views are too nursion, and are addressed to exclusively to their own wants. It is not possible to maintain answerem which is based upon the idea that the planters alone require labor and that the blacks of the confidence can furnish it. There is in Caristian as in the state, a comid-mable or centrel of the labor system must deeply affect this class, and they ought to be represent of lin any association which propose its regulations for the coming year.

I think, too, that the very purpose of this association, as expressed in the first of the proposed resolutions, is fortunately impracticable, the "liking the pieces of labor." The law of supply and demand controls the business of the world. All schemes of business or finance which fail to recognize and conform to this law are failacies, let them glitter as they may. If the planters of Christian agree to pay more for labor than It is worth, to keep their agreement will involve them in losses, if not ruin; if they offer less than its vaine, the laborer, white or black, will go claewhere. Labor, like commodities, will seek the best market.

The second resolution, which asserts the fundamental provision of the association to be, that, "no regro, now or fermeriv held as a slave by a member of this association, who has parted with the title, shall be employed by a member thereof without the written cansent of the former owner," involves what will be tound to le a practical paradox. Negrees are, and will be representedly as freemen, but they will not be certainedly as freemen, but they will not be reliable as laborers as long as their status ramains uncertain or in dispute, If the planters of Ghristian mean to losts that the blacks are still shaves and still operate to organize the inforesystem. If they are to be considered free, why not say so, and control the colored laborer by influence proper for the control of free people. The engacement which proposes refusal to hire such as fail without good cause to keep their contracts is sound in policy and morals. The second and third resolutions, those that provide that all contracts for labor shall be in writing, and that the President, in deciding controversics between the employer and the colored laborer shall receive the statement of both parties, are very judicious and proper. Now when a knowledge of the art of writing is so nearly universal, verbal contracts should be discouraged by the laws as productive of fraud, passion, and causeless litigation, and there is no good reason why all persons should not be permitted to testify. Truth is the object of judicial investigation. Let every one tell their story and courts and juries believe those who are worthy of credit.

These are the only points that occur to me as requiring special remark. The Freedmen's Bureau, which was organized under the anthority of the National Congress as a means of sifarding temporary government and protection to that portion of the inhabitants of this and other iste clave States who were not embraced within the general governmental system of the States, and were, by the overthrow and subversion of the system of slavery in their new relations, left without any species of protection or control, will cease its operations in Kentucky as soon as the State, through its own action, provides for them. It is confidently expected that this will be done by the Legislature. Then beyond doubt the Freedmen's Bureau will abandon the effect. While it ce uses to operate, its object will be to afford provides for them. It is confidently expected that this will be done by the Legislature. Then beyond from the proper in the proper in affording them labor and wages the policy is that which experience has shown to be the free foundation of progre

WATER FROM THE WELLE IN LOUISVILLE.

If any one of our citizens will get a bneket of water from any of the wells along the streets, and more especially if he will get it from a well sunk in the Interior of some of the older and more densely populated squares—and If he will let the bneket of water stand for a few days covered and undisturbed in a warm place at a temperature like that of snumer wather—he will find that it stills. He will find that it stills, He will find that it is fiat and stale and has something of the odor, but not the taste, of long kept rain-water. If he will take this well-water to a chemist and ask wherein it differs from that of rural springs, he will be told that the difference most notable and recognized by chemistry is the great abundance of nitrates in the water of the city well. If the chemist is asked whence the putrid smell, he will answer from the decomposition of animal matter gets into the well the answer will be not dead rats, oh. believing friend, but that this putrid matter in the seepage of privy vanits. How like ye this, dainty damsels, anxions mothers brooding over sickly children, feeble valetudinarians bundled up in flannel, wraps, losty, luxurions servitors of the belly god, jolly aldermen at city feasts, does the lidea that in every drop yon drink, in your coffee, sonp, or tea, that in everything driukable, of which water forms a part, you are guiping the soakage of privy vanite? Good reader, this is the bold, the simple, the maked truth in Lonisville.

If this were all we might get along with it,

imple, the naked truth in Lonisville.

If this were all we might get along with it simple, the naked truth in Lonsville.

If this were all we might get along with it, since de gustibus non dieputandum est is as true of eating or drinking as in kissing. But it isn't all. Typhus fever, choiera, dysentery, at least, among diseases, spread chiefly through the forcal discharges. The stools of typhus fever patients give off into the atmosphere from the vessels containing them the polson producins the disease, or this same poison dissolved in the water of privy vaults filters through the soil into the water of privy vaults filters through the soil into the water wells and poisons those who drink therefrom—poisons them with typhoid fever, poisons them not always or necessarily to severe sickness or to death, but as men taking arsenic or other deadly drugs get a little sick or die. secording to the dose. So these well-poisonings may do no more than produce a passing malaise, or may prostrate families—ueighbor—housemaids servants of dithy, shiftless households, throw these forcal matters of the typhold, choleric, or dysenteric patient on the ground, the soil scakes them up; or drying upon the surface, the misams contained lie dormant until rain works them down into lower strata, or with the son's help allows decomposition of the containing substances to take place, and throws looked the almosphere the rest not the surface that almosphere the rest not the surface to take place, and throws looked the surface to take place, and throws looked the surface to take place, and throws looked the testing the surface to take place, and throws looked the testing the surface to take place, and throws looked the testing the surface to take place, and throws looked the testing the surface to take place, and throws looked the testing the surface to take place, and the surface the testing the surface to take place, and throws looked the testing the matter that the surface the surface to take place, and until rain works them down into lower strata, or with the sun's help allows decomposition of the containing substances to take place, and throws loose into the aimcaphere the pent-up centaginm. Medical books abound in instances. Thus we remember reading of a convent where the whole community, drinking from one well, all grew sick with what the doctors called pith-genic fever, one of the typhus class, and passing current in our midst, they tell us, for typhoid. An examination showed the overflowing of an ill-constructed drain into the soil near the well, and the waste water from the pump working the fuscal matter down into the well. So sgain, the doctors in the city tell us, perhaps some of our up town doctors can tell the story better, that a fatal local epidemic of typhoid somewhere near Main and Wenzel streets was traced to a poisoned well—a well polysmed clearly from the seepage of typhoid matter rom patient's stools.

We commend these facts to our readers, the carration of them to be digested to a betterend, we hope then whilom the matters treated of have been digested in their belties. For the cholora is coming slowly, but as surely and relentisety as the judgment day, and now as then the mominalism will not hide us.

THE CASE BETWEEN ENGLAND AND AMDRICA The following note, which contains a very accurate and compressed statement of the present differences between England and this country rae addressed some time since to a member of the British Cabinet, and is well worthy of

Insertion:

NEW YORK AUGUST 16, 1861

Believe mc, you are blue to the dependency of the Common and such vessels, armed and epiniped in British torte, to leave them and prevupon the commerce of 'this country. They sail from a liverpool noter the British flag; their nationality is English, and it is as notorious that they are istended for the Confederate service as that the steamships of the Cunard line leave Liverpool periodically for the United States. When this rebellion is subdued by the North, which it assuredly will be, what answer can your Government insake to the claims of the American Government for compensation for the lesses sustained by their commerce? It will be futile to urge the plea that your Foreign Enlistment Act was inadequate by its provisions to prevent these piratical vessels leaving the barbors of Great Britain. That act is a mere municipal law, obligatory only upon British subjects. International law, by the equity of which all such claims would be decided, is of higher Import. That law is based upon the principles of reatural justice, and the obvious answer of the American Government would be: 'If you have not any existing law adequate to probbit, represent the comment would be: NEW YORK August 16, 1861 If you have not any existing law adequate prohibit each vessels from being bullt, are und equipped within your dominions, you in mactione. This decree, purporting to be based upon the alleged flight of Juarez, the Republican President, from Mexico into the United States, as. ace that any further resistance on the part of the Republican forces is not legitimate warfare but simple treason, and so denounces against it the severest and harshest penalties due to treason. But the truth is, that Jaurez did not take and has not taken flight from Mexico, and, moreover, even if he had done so, his for till remaining in Mexico, commanded by able Generals under an authority never abdicated, would not be divested of the right to be treated in all cases as legitimate warriors. The real or nominal chief of a power may fly or be slain but the power remains, so long as it is one, and chooses to make itself felt as one. Maximilian's decree, as published, is one of the most strocious things in the records of despotism. It challenges the world's indignation says: "Not only those who resist the imperial loress in open battle, but those who merely belong to an organized band, or society, not recognized as legitimate by the imperial laws, if ken, are to be summarily tried by court-martial, and on conviction are to suffer death within hand, the like brief period only is allotted for the preliminaries of trial; thus the whole tragedy of trial and punishment is to be compressed within the compass of eight and forty hours. The unities demanded by the critics could hardly be more closely observed even in the mimic drama. Like terrible vengeance is threatened against what must necessarily be a much larger class of persons, namely: all those who voluntarily assist the Republican partisans, give them money, provisions, or any other marisl aid, or afford them advice or information. Those who knowingly conceal guerrillas in their houses are to be imprisoned from six menths to two years, unless the guilty party stand in the relation of parent, child, wife, brother, or sister of the outlaw, in which case the decree considerately relaxes the severity of the penalty in favor of the laws of nature; but lenge men's votes for alleged want of characte the offender must remain under the surveilance of the authorities for such a period as a court martial shall direct. Persons who circulate false reports calculated to disturb the public peace are to be fined and imprisoned. A fine is also denounced against proprietors who neglect to give the authorities immediate information of the passage of armed bands through their property; and residents of cities and villages are subjected to similar responsibilities in reference to movements in their neighborhoods. Town residente who refuse to come forward in case of eatened attack, are likewise to be fined, and the towns themselves may be muleted for suffering themselves to be overcome. Officials who shall the former be admitted to the polls, and fail to exforce the requirements of the law are the latter excluded? The census returns show to be punished according to the gravity of their | that, in some of the States, there are tens of see, and to close and crown this formidable thousands of those accustomed to vote who catalogue of penalties, the door of hope is cannot read and write, and a very considerable closed in the face of every offender by the stern declaration that no application for pardon will be considered, or even received." Of course, in response to this terrible decree flaunting the black flag as high as the skies the Republican party in Mexic o has hoisted a flag as black and as high. The Republican party could do nothing else—this the whole world must recognize. The whole of the infamous atrocity is on the side of the Imperial power in Mexico-not a particle of it on the side of the Republicans. And we ask whether it is not the duty of the United States, not only as a country devoted to the Monroe doctrine, but as a ful as to the admission, as a rule, of those who christian country and a country acknowledging cannot take the oath, and we share the doubt the sympathies and the dictates of a nuiversal Mr. Johnson evidently does not expect the reanity, to interpose, and if necessary with | Feal of the law before the organization of Conber mighty iron arm, to put an end to such a gress. It will not be well to count upon it. If

The New York Journal of Commerce oath in every instance where this is practicable, contraction of the currency "most certainly will not be led by any human power," and that "all the talk" about contraction "is the mercet buncombe, which will lead to no corresponding action." "Political leaders may reccommend the measure at a safe distance," we are further assured, "but none will be found bold enough to begin the experiment."

It may come in gradual approaches, stealing its way quietly along the shrinking narves, or it may come in endden convulsions, but it will never find the community prepared for it or ready to welcome it. Nature does a kindly work when she racks the frame in her faithful struggles to throw off a dangerous disease; but what patient ever submitted to the process without a groan?

We don't know who commissioned the Jour nal of Commerce to speak by anthority in this oracular, ex-cathedra etyle. We don't believe it has any such authority, and we suggest that there is quite as much "buncombe" in its prophetice as in anything that has been said in favor of a contraction of the currency-perhave a little more.

We don't believe Secretary McCulloch made his late Fort Wayne speech for buncombe, or that he contemplated a great "distance" between it and action. Furthermore, we think that the work of contraction will, must be "led by human power." We don't think there will te anything enperhuman about it. We don't believe there will be any miracle wrought in our behalf. Whatever is done will be, it seems rather probable, by human agency. The vaticinations of the Journal of Commerce sound to us very much like nonsense. We do not see the philosophy of waiting for nature to do her 'kindly work" in racking our frames | We must be vigilant to guard them against before taking any measures in the premises. It seems to us much more sensible to take timely steps to prevent the said "work," and then it will never come. It is only your unreasonable and unreasoning blockhead that ruu his head against a sharp post which he discovers in iront of him. Instead of drifting into "sudden convul alons," it is the part of wisdom and safety to change our course, and, by opportune action, avoid them altogether. It is better to prepare for evils than to encounter them without any the Southern States, which have been in rebel-lion, should not be "blessed" with their propreparations, and it is better still to put forth intelligent and vigorous efforts to prevent them portion of the national debt. We apprehend that the unfortunate South will need no addiwhen they are preventable. We do not believe any financial crash to be necessary, or that it will come, unless the speculating gamblers tional "tlessing" in that line. And we would and their allies, and those who counsel the country to imitate the philosophy of the Turk, to her people's powers and necessities. have even that tempered wisely and merciful who smokes on composedly as the fire approaches his dwelling, ejaculating, "Allah is Great," shall be able to thwart the efforts of the papers in regard to the present condition Administration in the inauguration of a policy of contracting the currency. We believe Secwe may indge from what they say, the Admin retary McCulloch to be in earnest in his intention to contract the currency, and we nuderstand that the President and other officers of South than in the North. And yet that policythe Government heartily agree with him and we mean the main substance of it—las, we have no doubt, the support of at least twowill second his efforts. If Congress shall turn a deaf ear to any proposal for contraction, if it shall profligately lend itself to continued inflation, and thus give countemance to the wild thirds or three fourths of the people of the North. With, perhaps, some modifications, is spirit of extravagance, speculation, and corrup-tion, already too rife, then, indeed, we shall all wake up some fine morning not far off in the midst of "sudden convulsions," which will pay us for our foolhardiness, blindness, and stupidity. It will not be a long journey to such

The Republic learns that Mr. Quesenberry, of Joules county, formerly owned a negro woman and children, who remained with him from the time of the evacuation of Richmond until reently. The husband of the woman demanded Mr. Onsenberry water, for his wife, ager. tentiv. The husband of the woman demanded of Mr. Quesenberry wages for his wife's services, which demand Mr. Quesenberry was not disposed to accede to, and told him that if he shought they were worth more than their radions and clothing he might take them off. This the negro was not disposed to do, and became very insolent. Mr. Quesenberry told him to go off and take his family with him. He refused to go, and followed Mr. Quesenberry to his hogpen, and started to climb the sence, with the view of attacking Mr. Quesenberry, as the latter thought, who, with the intention of defending himself, drew his knife and infected a wonned in the negroe's side which proved fatal. The Newbern Times gives the following acunt of a recent disturbance in that place: disturbance of a serious character occurred

We understand a difficulty occurred on Middie street, between Pollock and South Front, Saturdax, in which the principals were a citizen

the chair he used the following language:

The Concitution of 1799 has been substituted by that of 1865, and by its provisions, social, and hereattary institutions have been abolished. The labor which contributed so largely to the capital of the country, it not altogether gone, is to exist in a new shape, and we enter on a new experiment, if oppressed by present overbearing circumstances, still full of hope for the future. On many a fearful battle-field-Southern valor, subjected to the most trying tests, has been proudly exhibited, and that same spirit of proud self-dependence, in a new and changed field of operations, can empty the necessary energy and industry to conquer all obstacles, and make us once more a happy and prospercaregy and industry to conquer all obstacles, and make us once more a happy and prosperous people You have each of you under oath assumed the obligation to protect, preserve, and defend as well the Constitution of the United States as that of the State of South Carolina. Your honor once pledged, who that knows anything of the character of our people, will doubt that you will readily and cheerfully render to the general Government of your country all that duty, patriotism, and sense of right will demand? I full well know that you will contribute all your efforts and ability to build ap for me a republic which will be the admiration of the world, and will conclude as one great and undivided people. Let a recollection of the past be burled, and, with encouraging hope for the fusure, proceed in the good work which we this day begin.

ng taken exceptions to some editorial remarks Those who have read these columns the past three months will wonder at the charge of atriving to 'embitter the South against the North.' Our best efforts have been made to heal the wounds and assuage the heartburnings of the bitter past. We have done this to an extent that has jeoparded our good name with warm Southern friends and coadjutors, and we have taken the risk of being misunderstood, because it appeared to us to he a public and we have taken the risk of being misunders stood, because it appeared to us to be a public duty we owed to our people, and to the well being of the whole country to whose Government we had eworn allegiance. But distinctly we never have taken such an oath to Sumner and Bercher. We are glad to hear from our censor that Beecher and Greeley have uttered words of "mercy and paclification" in respect to Mr. Davis, and that they are improving. Pablic opinion at the North' is improving a good many of this school of bloody bigots. We fear theirs savors a good deal of a death-bed repentance.

We apprehend it is the chastening hand of prospective advantity that moderates the violence of the flerce lanatics. Nor do we doubt that if they had the power the guillotine would have been erected, not only for Mr Davia, but it would run with the blood of the best and noblest Southern survivors of the war. Our position, then, is a thorough and cordiol minon bet wint the North and the Bouth, but no faith in faustics in politics and religious combined. An enterprising firm in this city having abundant means, foreign connections, and familiar with the whole business of coolie importation, recently addressed Mr. Saward, the Secretary of State, to know whether the United States would add in or give its sanction to the experiment of introducing these laborers into the South. This communication was referred to areau of Immigration, which replied that that is, transportation of Chinese from any part of China to any foreign port, with a view of holding them to servitude, or, for a term of very sears, as laborers. B ston Commercial Bulletin, to learn that our Government is not disposed to allow the piracies apon our commerce during the rebellion to pass into oblivion. Mr. Seward has called upon those who have suffered loss at the hands of the early as possible. The arguments which passed not avail much now. As the second commercial power of the earth, our statesmen will have something to say on our own account when the application of maritime law comes under discussion. The logic that when a ser thief escapes from a neutral port, by the act of escape becomes a legitimate vessel of war, and as such is entitled to protection in British ports, will not be entertained for a moment. On the contrary, we have a right to spect that our statesmen will contend that a nentral power was in duty bound to prevent its people making

It is well known that our Government not only protested against the departure of the 290, alias Alabama, but furnished the British Government with abundant evidence that she was designed to prey upon our commerce This evidence was so convincing that Earl Russell was at last constrained to issue an order fo her detention; but, as if the Government was enough to permit her to escape.

What then was the duty of the British Go ernment? It was clear that she had violated the law. Earl Russell, with all his sophistry, did not attempt to explain away this fact, but simply expressed his regret and considered him. not apply the same logic to her that he applies to a thief or a murderer? When Muller was suspected of murder, and it was known that he had sought refuge in the United States, did Earl Russell or his Government consider him innocent, and allow his crime to be lost sight of by the expression of a "regret?" Far from it: he was hunted down, and justly too, and made to suffer the penalty of his crime. This is what our Government had a right to expect in relation to the 290, alias Al-

Why, then, did not the British Government issue orders to have her captured by some of its numerous cruisers? Because-A disturbance of a serious character occurred at the dence hall, near the depot, between unice and ten o'clock Friday night, during which the deor, keeper was shot through the leg by a rifle ball. Some of the colored soldiers stationed here endeavored to gain admittance without paying, and, on being refused, raised the row. Fart of them were armed with their rifles and others with pistols. Both kinds of weapons were freely used in the affray, but, as far as is known, only one man was hit. Marshal Kehoe, with a pose of men, was promptly on hand, and quiet was soon restored. Why do the officers of the colored regiments sile we their men to carry their rifes with them whenever they choose? Such things should not be permitted, as men maddened with poor whisky are not fit to have loaded guns in their possession.

The Raleigh Standard of October 30 publishes a column and a half list of persons in North Carolina who have been pardoned by the Prosident, and who will be entitled to vote at electicans hereafter to be held in that State.

At the assembling of the South Carolina Legislature, Colonel F. J. Moses was elected temporary President of the Senate. On taking the chair he used the following language:

The Constitution of 1790 has been assistanted by that of 1865, and by its provisions, social, and betterlians; matintings have been assistanted by that of 1865, and by its provisions, social, and betterlians; matintings have been assistanted by that of 1865, and by its provisions, social, and betterlians; matintings have been assistanted to the state of the outrages upon our commerce. For these we will demand indemnity; and the British people, who enjoyed the luxury of illuminating the ocean with our burning shipping, onght not to complain if they are called upon to pay for the entertainment.

The recent correspondence between Mr. Adams and Earl Russeii gives additional importance to this subject—a subject we have kept constantly before the public—and justifies our recurring to it again, even at the expense of repeating our former arguments. Truth gains strength by repetition.
